Michigan in Summer

Is termed the ideal vacation land and it would seem as if this were true, judging from the beautiful pictures of woods and streams illustrated in the booklet of the above title. The many resorts of this state are described and illustrated and the book we believe, will be eagerly sought for by those planning a vacation in the northern woods.

RANT IS PASSED OUT TO RECALL COHORTS

opera house and meet the opposition in their own convention, that they would take the judgment by default," said Fisher. "Yes, that's the way they want to do it, but they'll have a hard time getting it that way because we are going to fight."

Referring to the Finley case, Fisher said: "Dougherty says that he wanted Finley's license and didn't care for his five cohorts. But why didn't he practice the same mean policy in the case of poor Billy Knipp, who with a wife and three little children to support he threatened with execution unless he paid his fine at once. Why so liberal to the well-to-do Mr. Finley and so exacting with poor Billy Knipp? I say Mayor Fathers stands for the rich against the poor."

Fisher also contended that Fathers fostered a move to throttle home industry when he enacted the zone liquor regulation for the reason that four of the saloons falling under the ban were operated by the "Widow" Buoh and two by the Croak Brewing company.

As the matter of the moral conditions Fisher said: "You, men, know the conditions as they exist just as well as I do. I don't have to tell you. Fathers loosens things up now and then in order to get the support of the saloons, but things are tightened up a bit at present because the word has been passed along that saloonkeepers and others must be on their guard during the campaign week. And then he promises the people on the hill that things will be tightened up after election while he tells the saloon men that after election things will go on as before. He tells a different story to different people."

Fisher had a lot to say about love of home and of children and of wife, and how the working man cared for these ties as much as the rich man on the hill. It was preposterous, he said, taking these things into consideration, that the administration should charge that the recallists were seeking to establish a city of vice and licentiousness.

"They are raising a hue and cry as a subterfuge and are throwing the question of the city's morals out as a cloak with which to cover the real issues of the campaign before the people," was his closing shot.

Candidate Nichols had much to say about the waterworks. He dwelt on the fact that he was the father of the municipal ownership idea in Janesville how he had secured the introduction of the resolution in the common council, how he had championed the cause in the Twilight club, and at a meeting of the Baptist brotherhood where he completely looted such men as Otto Oestreich, W. H. Dougherty, Tommie Nolan and Fred Burpee, with his arguments, taking them completely by surprise, and where he demanded an endorsement of the question from the gentlemen present.

Nichols further narrated what would have been the saving to the city $12,000 to $15,000 at least in a year, he said, if the city had owned the water works. He blamed Fathers for deliberate delay in the matter of the purchase of the plant and asked where and when the Mayor had ever come out unequivocally in support of city ownership, while it was a matter of public knowledge, he said, that City Attorney Dougherty had opposed such a purchase.

Nichols went into detail in regard to his own business affairs, relating how he had risen from the ranks of worker and established his business against "tremendous opposition." "I have fought my way up with working men and now I am candidate just because I want to help you. We will carry a stain forever on our characters and the reputation of our city unless we win this fight. Just because they say we stand for lawlessness doesn't make it so. I appeal to you as men to make the fight. If we go down in defeat we will come back again, but do your best, boys—do your best," was his closing injunction.

Peter Goodman was called on and made an attempt to explain why he did not appear on Tuesday night when his name was called. He came forward with the proposition that the city's moral condition was as bad as it ever was and he said he was "in a position to know." "I know a few things about the hotels that have been open to women during the last winter, and it has been better for my business than when the houses of prostitution flourished," he declared. Goodman made some veiled statements regarding a woman who he said was robbed and thrown into the river last Thursday night about which nothing was said in the papers and about which the police had kept quiet, and also referred to a midnight prowling of a minister who finally went home after making a part of the rounds, on a tour of inspection.

Former Alderman Dulin came forward with the statement that he represented the general attack which had been made on the recall party in the pulpits on Sunday last. "I think as much of this city as any one and when they are making a mistake, I've a family and a class me as an outcast they are making here and I'll stay there in spite of 'em all." He attacked the commission plan as it had been working out because he charged the money was all being spent on the hill while in the other sections of the city no improvements had been made. He would make an affidavit, he said, that but $500 had been spent in the fifth ward this year. "And unless we can change things at this election they'll have a fine place fixed up for themselves on the hill there," was his parting threat.

R. R. Lay came forward when called upon announcing with some acclaim: "Let ye forget, I am here." He made a somewhat pretentious and rather disconnected appeal for a square deal for the working men attacking, on the way, the churches for hypocrisy, and praising any man who would stand up for and protect a woman. He left off with the promise that he would have something more to say at a later meeting.

OBITUARY.

Miss Catherine Andrews, daughter of Mrs. Mary J. Andrews, died at her home in the town of Deerfield, Dane county, Wisconsin, at 5 o'clock, July 14. She had been in poor health for nearly a year and in the last few weeks failed very rapidly. Miss Andrews was born in Madock, Ontario, coming to Wisconsin with her parents when she was two years old. She lived in Janesville most of her life and was a member of the First Baptist church of this city. Her virtuous life and unselfish services were an inspiration to her friends who were many and firmly attached to her. Surviving the departed and mourning her loss are her mother, Mrs. Mary J. Andrews of Deerfield; three sisters, Mrs. L. A. Blasing and Mrs. Elizabeth Andrews of Sunner, Wis., and Miss Emma Andrews of Deerfield; and one brother, Frank Andrews of this city, besides other relatives. Thomas Andrews, her father, died several years ago. The funeral will be held from the home at 3:20 o'clock Friday, after which the body will be taken to this city for burial in Oak Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Frank Young. The remains of Mrs. Frank Young of Bismarck, South Dakota, arrived in this city last evening, accompanied by Mr. Young and his two sons and were taken to the home of her father, E. C. Harlow, 1020 Ravine street, where funeral services were conducted at ten o'clock this morning by the Rev. Father Henry Willmann. Those who served as pallbearers were Edward Amerpohl, John Stevens, Harry Garbutt, and William Tallman. Interment was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

written and publication authorized by the John C. Nichols' personal committee and to be paid for by their treasurer, John E. Kennedy at the rate of 25 cents per inch.

An Invisible Government at Work

Strenuous efforts are being made by the supporters of the Mayor to begot the real issues in the campaign by hiding under the guise of morality till their cant smells to Heaven, we the undersigned, acting under authority of the Personal Campaign Committee of John C. Nichols, herewith submit what we believe is the issue when stripped to the very core.

As the tale that the workings of the Invisible Government unfolds is a long one, it will appear in two installments, the second of which will be published tomorrow.

Respectfully submitted,

H. L. MAXFIELD, Chairman
J. S. SMITH, Secretary
The Personal Campaign Committee

From the day that the count of the vote declared James A. Fathers Mayor of Janesville, there had established itself at the City Hall, and representing the local public utilities, an Invisible Government.

Firmly seating itself in the chair of the mayor, this Invisible Government has silently sent its long tentacles around the throat of the community, while its smooth hands were busy nailing the administration high upon the flag pole of its corporations.

Having now become master of the situation and feeling secure of its power, it masked itself in the garb of the administration and stood forth as the real government.

When sometime ago the voters decided to free the city from the heavy exactions of the Water Company and voted to take it over, a black terror had seized them all and now was their chance to club the people into silent submission.

Realizing that the curbing of the peoples' ambition to own the Water Works must be accomplished within the lifetime of this administration, great care was taken that nothing may disturb the community and arouse the peaceful sleep of its inhabitants, lest they be discovered and driven out of the Halls of government.

Though pledged in the campaign to give the city a new garb of morality, nothing startling was ever done, as the administration was anxious to please all elements and thereby atone for its shame and ease its conscience.

But when in the dim light of a winter's night two drunken youths foully murdered a weak-minded girl at the end of a day's debauch, the people stood horrified at the thought of a crime so atrocious, in the very midst of a community they believed to be redeemed from vice and lawlessness.

Fully awakened to the true conditions in the city and unable to bear any longer the spinelessness of the administration as evidenced by the manner in which they permitted a self constituted committee to lead them around by the nose, and jointly with others who for some time suspected the existence of an Invisible Government, silently at work, the people concluded to pull up the administration root and stalk and with that purpose in view, circulated recall petitions.

Amazed at such boldness and trembling lest the recall be successful and cause the fall of the administration and end their power, the deft hand of the Invisible Government was now put to work by the corporations to save the administration at all hazards.

With mop and bucket in hand, the Mayor was sent around to clean up all black spots in the town, while they stationed themselves at the doors of the city clerk and the city attorney, and there awaited the coming of the petitions.

Twice did the petitions come and twice were they refused recognition for one reason or another. Each time did our officials hide behind legal technicalities and the Invisible Government showed its snug face above the desk of the city clerk.

Though the people in every increasing number demanded that the officials obey the plain provisions of the law, the only answer received would be to sit quiet as the circulating of the petitions was the work of the devil and signed but by criminals and loafers.

With cries that rent the very heavens they proclaimed the city in the hands of vicious elements, bent upon the destruction of Janesville and the beheading of its administration.

Frightened by the conditions so loudly proclaimed to exist in the city, strangers avoided it as they would a plague, while mothers of the surrounding territory trembled at the thought of permitting their sons and daughters to enter such a nest of outlaws and pleaded with their husbands to stay away.

So badly was the character of the city assailed that men and women stood in dumb astonishment and wondered that the merchants did any business at all. In the meantime the administration was striking out blindly with an ordinance here and a law there, and with the keen sword of authority slew the imaginary monster of immorality which was supposed to be eating out the vitals of the people.

When finally threatened by the exasperated public to drag the officials into the courts and compel them to accept the petition and submit the question of the recall to the voters, the Invisible Government withdrew its hands, while the administration collapsed and offered to compromise upon the basis of trying it first upon the Mayor, and this campaign is the result.

CIVIC CLUB ENLISTS SERVICES TO FIGHT AGAINST RECALLERS

Organization Formed to Help Ward Committees in Canvassing City — W. H. Dougherty Gives Address.

For the purpose of putting the issues of the coming election in a true light before the young men of the city of Janesville the Civic Club composed of young men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty was organized last night and despite the sultry weather a fair crowd turned out to attend the meeting, at the assembly room at the city hall. City Attorney W. H. Dougherty presided at the meeting and gave an address regarding the fight between the two parties, which the voters are to decide at the polls next week.

"It is up to the young men of the city to take an active interest in this election," was the opening statement of Mr. Dougherty, "and every person young, or old is vitally interested in the outcome."

"Every person is interested in the maintenance of good government, and in order to win this fight, the young men of the city have got to do their share. It is our purpose to put these issues at stake, clearly before the people, and with sober thought, on the part of the constituency, we do not fear the outcome."

The young men have some time got to take an active part in the government of our city and they can never begin too early to become acquainted with the rules and regulations regarding municipal affairs."

"The recall is supposed to be an instrument for the removal of an official that has proven false to the public trust and while there has been no hue and cry of graft regarding the city officials in office in Janesville, the people of Janesville find that the recall in this city is an actuality and are face to face with the most bitter fight that has ever been waged in this city," said Attorney Dougherty.

It has been the claim of the recall party that they have the younger men of the city with them and this was explained by the fact that they had promised if successful in this campaign, to make Janesville "a live town." It is their contention that the city at the present time is decidedly dead and if the "faithfuls" are given the trust of the city Janesville will be equipped with amusement parks that will furnish the younger men with plenty of entertainment. "Why at present the administration allows all amusements that are decent and respectable, and if they can show where they are going to give the young men a better chance for a respectable good time, they've got to show us," was the emphatic statement of Dougherty in answering the claims of the Recall party.

On becoming interested in his subject Dougherty made the statements regarding the claims of the Recall party in their fight to dodge the real issues at stake. "We are fighting ghosts," declared Mr. Dougherty, "and when we come to investigate their claims they vanish into thin air and we challenge them to defend their statements in their advertisements at the public meeting Friday night at the mass meeting which will be held at the Myers' Opera House. Let them have a representative there that night and before the public we will answer any arguments as to the inefficiency of James Fathers."

"We are going to carry this fight into the camp of the enemy and right up to their breastworks and build a fire under them," was the manner in which Dougherty explained the way in which the Fathers' campaign committee was going to conduct its fight for good government. The speaker maintained that the opposition party "had nothing to hang their hats on" when their arguments are given careful consideration.

"In regards to the 'faithfuls' claim regarding the present administration being in hands of the 'Invisible Government,' maintained it was certainly 'invisible' and the speaker went on to explain that the present officials had had no business with any of the companies that the opposition party has alleged the present council is in the power of and what contracts that those companies have now were made under the old common council system of government; that their claim as to the Fourth Avenue bridge is all 'poppycock' as the bridge was built, detail by detail in conformance of the contract that the council of which Mr. John C. Nichols was mayor passed during its terms of office.

Answering the arguments of the Nichols' campaign committee about the allowing the property owners to erect buildings on Milwaukee street bridge Mayor Fathers is as powerless to hinder or advance either side, as the state legislature of New York. All claims of the Recall party were given a thorough airing and the speaker declared that it was all a "trumped up" situation.

In closing his speech Dougherty made an earnest plea for the young men to join with the others to aid in every possible manner in the fight for "Clean Janesville" and thereby creating an interest for city politics that will prove of value in the future. It was Mr. Dougherty's assertion that Mr. Fathers was satisfactory to everybody except those whose pocketbooks had been pinched by the passing of ordinances that were aimed to make the city one that the citizens could justly be proud of. "We want to vote—and to make everyone else vote and to make the men who will settle this question, see it in the right light," explained the attorney. It is the purpose of the Civic club to enlist in aiding the five ward committees in canvassing the city in order to know just how every voter stands and his views on the conflicting points. The young men entered into the question with remarkable enthusiasm.

LEST WE FORGET.

In Aesop's Fables is found the tale of the wolf who clothed himself in the skin of a sheep and getting among the flock by this means secured the opportunity of devouring many of them. Later his ruse was found out by the shepherd who caught him and strung him up by his neck to a tree as an example and punishment.

It is peculiar how this old fable fits so exactly the condition that exists in Janesville today. We are in the midst of a recall election contest. A contest brought upon us by men who objected to the enforcement of laws and ordinances which interfered with their personal privileges. Like the wolf, who took the skin of a sheep, these recallists are now seeking to cloak their real purposes that they may devour the public at will.

In their published articles they decry the accusation that they are not honest in their efforts to oust the present Mayor for the good of the city. They lay great claim to their assertions of mismanagement of this or of that public affair, ignore the true issue—law or lawlessness—by placing themselves in the role of martyrs, when it is even intimated that they would countenance a wide open town policy. They decry the thought they are seeking their present aim for revenge and cant upon the manner in which they would conduct civic affairs if given the opportunity.

They object to the pastors of the various religious denominations taking part in the campaign, deplore the fact that the women, the mothers and sisters, have become active in the work and take the air of injured innocence when it is even suggested that they have not all the sanctity in their cause as that of a religious war.

This is in their statements to the public. They have discovered the word "invisible government," used in connection with the Mul-hall investigation of affairs in Washington, and make frequent use of it, comparing the management of affairs in Janesville to that of a large city. They arraign class against class, labor against capital, lay great stress upon the individual efforts of their candidate in his struggle to establish an industry and talk in circles to befuddle the voters into believing their cause is the simple pure article of reform.

This is in print, but what happens in their private gatherings when they are talking simply to the men they know to be faithful and planning to carry the election next Tuesday. There they throw aside the mask of hypocrisy. They talk openly that there should be no liquor zone, intimate there should be more retail liquor shops, decry the policy that compelled the liquor element to obey the laws and ordinances, pose as friends of the elements who believe their personal rights have been infringed upon.

They object to the pastors of the city taking part in the campaign, of the holding of meetings in churches, but gather in saloons to discuss ways and means, map out campaign plans and foregather at the old Armory block for nightly confabs. At their session Tuesday evening the candidate for mayor and his personal campaign committee members spoke. They appeared in their true light, talking to men who understood what the campaign really stands for—law or lawlessness.

One speaker stood before these men assembled and decried the driving out of the disorderly women from the city. Intimated that the men of Janesville were responsible for their present condition and that they should stick by them. Another speaker decried the present liquor zone; sought to raise class against class by saying it was the work of capitalists owning property within the zone limits who wanted more rental for their stores. A rosy-hued picture was drawn to the attention of the audience of what might be accomplished if their faction regained control of city affairs.

Viewed through the eyes of some it would be the city thrown wide open to every form of vice. The free and unlicensed enjoyment of all social evils. Liquor shops open night and day, slot machines merrily taking the nickels and dimes of the youths, wine rooms flourishing and the city ablaze with light, with the music of the clinking dice as an accompaniment. Autos and carriages rolling around the streets with merry-makers. A beautiful picture to view.

Like old Aesop's wolf they don the skin of the sheep before the public and devour the innocent lambs in the privacy of their own halls and meeting places. Will the end of the fable be the same as the punishment awarded the wolf? Will the voters on Tuesday next, enact the role of the careful shepherd and string the cunning beastie to the limbs of a tree, or will they be apathetic to the real conditions and permit the wolf to devour the whole flock by piecemeal? It is a vital question and one upon which every citizen should voice their sentiments by casting their vote.

Talk about the recallists brought about the present reforms in the city is as untrue as more than two-thirds of their statements. The recall talk did not start until after the present mayor and council had enforced laws which trod on the toes of those enjoying "special privileges." That is the inception of the whole proposition and the question is "law or lawlessness."

Essay on the Human Hair.
Under the microscope human hair is a more or less complex and very variable tissue. In size, shape and masonry (it is a sort of concrete structure) as well as color there is more or less variation of detail. Architecturally curly hair differs from the straight variety; kinky hair has a special construction of its own which explains the kinks; there's a reason, apparent under the revealing eye of the microscope, for the black, red, silky, and all other varieties.

The barometric depression that with local showers and thunderstorms prevailed from Utah to the peninsula, where rain has fallen, caused the rains of the past week. The depression has drifted eastward, and is now Atlantic coast, including the southern part of the Gulf of Mexico, and the Gulf of Mexico. A barometric trough across the North Central states from the Texas coast to the Gulf of Mexico. Elsewhere it is generally fair, except on the Florida peninsula, where rain has fallen, Tampa reporting 1.54 inches.

Personal Wit in Pulpit.

The pulpit is not immune from wit in our own day, but seldom takes the personal form of a certain divine who, preaching a university sermon at Oxford, ended abruptly by remarking that he "saw it was time to shut his book because the doctor's men had now come, wiping their heads, from the alehouse," referring thus to the custom of the mace bearers, who were wont to repair to a neighboring public house during the preaching and returning only when they thought it was nearly over.

Family Bible Substitute.

A man in custody at Willsden the other day was found to have "one arm tattooed with the story of his courtships and the names of his loves, while the other arm contained a record of his family bereavements."—Westminster Gazette.

Literary Note.

If boys tried to read between yellow covers some of the fiction that girls read these days under the name of late novels they would have to take their meals standing up.

Health Tip.

Locomotor ataxia is a chronic, progressive disease of the nervous system. It affects the spinal cord particularly. On this account it interferes with muscular co-ordination. It causes the gait of the patient to be irregular and uncertain.

Pessimism Sometimes Welcome.

A little discreet pessimism may have its use. Some people scatter sunshine so recklessly that a certain amount of cooling shade is necessary to comfort.

Marty Cutler of Chicago was in very poor shape, hadn't trained at all to speak of, and was thought to have not a chance at all when he went up against Tom McMahon at Peru, Ill., last Monday night. McMahon pounded the lining out of Marty and to the great surprise of all present McMahon had stood Gunboat Smith very successfully for ten rounds and had become very fast men. Cutler was fat as a pig and was hardly able to step around. However Marty had had the immense advantage of being Jack Johnson's sparring partner for a long while and the stuff he learned was a great help in his fight with McMahon. His blocking was perfect and he showed a Corbett-Johnson combination of boxing speed and power. McMahon was old and slow and was no match for him. But the difficulty seems to be that Cutler is unwilling to work hard at training in order to put himself in line with those who saw the McMahon Cutler fight. He might declare that if Marty could somehow get into real fighting trim it would be an awful job for anyone to stop him.

The concert held in the Court House park last evening by the Moose band, was attended by about the largest crowd that has been present at the previous concerts. The program was interesting, and the entertainment proved worthy of considerable mention, as a few of the selections, which were on the medley type, aroused considerable interest.

Because of a derailment of a freight engine near Monroe last evening, the Mineral Point passenger bound for Milwaukee, and due to arrive here at four-thirty, was over an hour late. The cause of the derailment, was due to the fact that the storm had so completely damaged the track bedding that the trains could not safely run over it. This line is built on exceedingly low ground, and much trouble has been experienced lately because of this.

The money will be greatly appreciated as there is urgent need for more equipment, as it is expected that a larger number of children will make use of the grounds as soon as the directors organise the class and routine work and have scheduled games. The spirit of the boys is very commendable and will be appreciated by the citizens.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Written and publication authorized by the "Good Government" Campaign Committee and to be paid for by their treasurer, Michael Hayes, at the rate of 25c per inch.

On the night of July 15th in the Janesville Daily Gazette, over the signatures of H. L. Maxfield and J. S. Smith, there was printed the platform of John C. Nichols upon which he goes to the voters on July 22.

This is the first time in all the long months of this contest that we have been favored with a definite statement of the charges and accusations upon which James A. Fathers is to be removed from his office as Mayor of this City. This platform, submitted by the Personal Campaign Committee of Mr. John C. Nichols, is interesting, for what it contains and for what it does not contain. The platform upon which Mayor Fathers presents himself to the people of Janesville for endorsement was published in the Janesville Daily Gazette on the night before the platform of Mr. Nichols appeared. You will remember that the platform of Mayor Fathers was explicit. It contained all of the things that he stood for; it contained an enumeration of all of the things that he had done; it contained a definite statement of the conditions that obtained under the administration preceding his, when Mr. Nichols was Mayor, and Mr. Maxfield, city attorney, and yet in the face of all this the platform of Mr. Nichols does not meet any of these propositions nor does it tell the voters where he proposes to stand.

It does not deny that gambling was open to the boys of our city, under his administration. It does not deny that houses of prostitution flourished. It does not deny that wine rooms frequented by women were maintained. It does not deny that saloons were kept open day and night and on Sunday. It does not deny that liquor was openly and notoriously sold to minors, both boys and girls. It does not deny that disorderly saloons were located in many places where police regulation was admittedly impossible. It does not deny that all this existed to the full knowledge of the police, who with the approval of the then Mayor failed to arrest offenders for such violation. It does not state where Mr. Nichols, the then Mayor, stood upon any of these propositions.

You will also remember that the platform adopted by the Good Government party contained a declaration of what Mayor Fathers had done to change the civic conditions of our city existing when he took the office of Mayor. The platform of Mr. Nichols does not state where he stands upon the eleven o'clock closing ordinance for saloons. It does not state where he stands upon the Sunday closing for saloons. It does not state where he stands upon the screen ordinance applying to saloons. It does not state where he stands upon the maintenance of wine rooms. It does not state where he stands upon the matter of public prostitution. It does not state where he stands upon the limitation that has been placed upon the number of saloons in our city and the limits wherein licenses shall be hereafter granted. You will also remember that the platform of the Good Government party contained an open invitation to Mr. Nichols to tell where he stood upon all of the foregoing facts and he was also invited to discuss the issues of this campaign at any public meeting held before election. Up to this time he has not made a statement upon these facts; neither has he nor any of his representatives appeared in any of the various public meetings that have been held, there to state his position in reference to these matters, nor has this invitation in any wise been accepted.

It is fair to the voters of this city, who are expecting to pass their judgment upon the matters involved in this campaign, that the position of both sides be openly and publicly stated and all of the facts be made known.

You will also remember that there was published a statement as to the business and financial standing of the City at the present time. This statement showed positively that Mayor Fathers has handled the City business in an intelligent, careful and thrifty manner; it demonstrates where he has saved thousands of dollars to the tax payers of this city. It is important to note that nowhere in the platform of Mr. Nichols can there be found the slightest allusion to the facts now mentioned.

We again, invite Mr. Nichols, or any representative he may choose to attend any of our public meetings and make a statement of his case. We are willing to send a representative to any of his meetings to there publicly and openly state our position upon all facts that voters there present have a right to know.

Upon referring to the platform of Mr. Nichols you will see that he holds that the Mayor "showed wanton disregard of the wishes of a large number of property owners on Milwaukee avenue by failing to grant the petition signed by property owners who asked to have the street paved with brick." The fact about this matter is, as the petition on file in the city hall shows, that but nine property owners joined in this petition instead of eighteen, and that these nine did not in fact want the street paved with brick but wanted one block paved with brick. This petition amounted to a request that the westerly end of Milwaukee avenue be maintained as a macadam highway and that one block be made of brick, and that the entire easterly end of said street be continued paved with macadam. The granting of this petition would have made a patch-work of the street. It would have meant a strip of macadam and a small strip of brick and then a strip of macadam. We ask those interested to take a look at Milwaukee avenue and see what kind of a job has been done. We ask them to consider what kind of a job would have been done had the petition been granted. We confidently assert that had the Council granted the foregoing petition they should all have been recalled. It would have made a botch of the whole job and would have made it the laughing stock of the city.

The last clause in the platform assigns favoritism in the building of the Fourth Avenue bridge, charging that it was not built in accordance with the plans and that the Milwaukee Elevator Company has been in some way favored. The fact about this matter is, that the present Mayor and Council followed absolutely the plans adopted for the bridge; that there was no concrete railing called for, either in the plans or specifications. The fact is that the bridge was finished in absolute compliance with the plans. Where Mr. Maxfield and Mr. Smith ever found the material for this charge is more than we can understand. They certainly did not take the trouble to look at the records in the City Hall. If they had they would not have made this misrepresentation. We believe that when a man presents himself for Mayor and offers to the voters of the city a proposition so inconsequential and so entirely without foundation as this one, it shows that the material at his command is of little importance.

Mr. Maxfield and Mr. Smith, speaking for Mr. Nichols, charge that the seat of government, in this city, is not in the City Hall, but upon the Milwaukee street bridge. What they mean by this no one knows but themselves. We take it to mean, however, that they charge Mayor Fathers with being under the control of the local public utilities. This broad and unsupported statement loses its importance when you stop to think, that these public utilities are absolutely under the control of the State Railway Commission. There is nothing that the Mayor and Council may do for them, there is nothing that the Mayor and Council can do against them. All of the rules and regulations under which these utilities operate are laid down by the State Railway Commission. Even the taxation of these companies is subject to state review, and in the case of the Electric Company the taxation is absolutely made in detail by the State Commission. It is also stated in this platform of Mr. Nichols that these companies come in daily conflict with the common interests of the people. The fact about the matter is, that during the fifteen months of Mayor Fathers' administration, there cannot be pointed out one piece of business of any kind or character, wherein the city had to do with these utilities or any of them. In the light of this statement which can be supported by the public record, what becomes of the charge of conflicting interests? Remember that one of the reasons why the State Railway Commission was given charge of these utilities was to do away with the faults that had grown up by reason of local control. Remember also that the Mayor and Council have no privilege to offer nor right to withhold. These utilities are independent of the Council and have absolutely no business to transact with it.

These charges must appear to the voters to be rather ridiculous, but we gladly answer them because they are the first definite statements that we have been able to gain from the opposition.

While the situation of the city and the Janesville Water Company has been given the widest publicity both in the columns of the Gazette and the Recorder, yet we will at this time make a further short statement concerning it. In this connection it is important and it has been repeatedly stated to the voters that whatever delay has taken place in this matter, is owing to the blunder of Mr. Nichols and Mr. Maxfield, who were then respectively Mayor and City Attorney. If these men had properly performed their public duty at that time, the Janesville Water Works would now be the property of the city of Janesville. They started this matter wrong and are now criticising the present Mayor because he has been unable before now to straighten out their error. The fact about the matter is that his case has been handled as rapidly as possible under the circumstances. It has been stated many times in the public press that the Railroad Commission, which has complete charge of this matter, has approved of the manner of handling this case, in view of the fact that another case is before it upon a like situation. Mr. Nichols has never stated what he would do to secure the Water Works as rapidly as he proposes. The fact of the matter is, that he can do nothing in this matter more than is already being done.

In the platform of Mr. Nichols the date of January 21st, 1913, is given as the date of filing of the notice of election. From this the voter is permitted to believe that this was the first time it ever received any attention from the Mayor or the City Attorney. The fact is, and it can be proven by the Commission, that many conferences were held prior to this date. The date of filing of the notice was in entire accord with the wishes of the Railroad Commission.

Mr. Maxfield and Mr. Smith charge that Mayor Fathers and his appointee, City Attorney, Mr. Dougherty, used gross unfairness in remitting the fine of Mr. Finley, who was convicted of selling beer to two blind minors. That matter falls peculiarly within the province of the City Attorney and he has prepared a complete statement of all the facts. This statement appears in tomorrow night's issue of the Gazette and we refer it to the attention of the voters.

The gentlemen representing the platform of Mr. Nichols hold that Mayor Fathers showed utter disregard of the wishes of the people of Janesville by not permitting them to decide the kind of bridge at Milwaukee Street, whether steel or concrete. The answer to this is that there is absolutely no provision of law under which such a question could be submitted to the voters. The proposition is further answered by the vote of the people themselves. Mr. Nichols, through his advertising medium, The Daily News, advocated the defeat of the bond issue at the polls and gives all of his reasons therefore, and the matter is settled and disposed of and it is fair to say that the great majority of the voters of this city will be pleased to know that the work will be started at once, and will be finished by the first day of December next.

In conclusion we would suggest that Mr. Nichols, or some one in his behalf, come to the Opera House Friday night and there present the Water question, the Finley question, the bridge question, the Milwaukee Avenue paving question, the Fourth Avenue bridge matter and any other matter that they may deem of importance in this controversy. We assure them a fair and courteous hearing and ample time to present their case. We have endeavored to fairly answer every proposition they have put forth. And if anything has been overlooked we will be glad to hear from them. You will note that nowhere has Mr. Nichols charged the misappropriation of a single penny of the public money. You will note that he has nowhere shown where the public business has been extravagantly carried on, where a single dollar has been wasted. You will note that they have not brought forth a fact that reflects upon Mayor Fathers as a public official or as a private citizen. We are informed that it is secretly argued that the taxes of some persons were higher than they should be last year, but no public mention has been made of this circumstance, owing to the fact that the entire reassessment took place under the administration of Mr. Nichols and he also was the cause of any addition to the taxes of any tax payer.

We suggest that a fair, careful and impartial examination of all of the facts will justify every voter in the City of Janesville in casting a vote on July 22nd for Mr. Fathers and a better Janesville.

LADIES ORGANIZED TO OPPOSE RECALL

FIVE WARD COMMITTEES NAMED
AT PUBLIC MEETING HELD YESTERDAY.

ENTHUSIASM IS SHOWN

Speakers Express Confidence in Ability of Women to Influence Votes
Of The Men.

Women will play an active part in the campaign against the recall of Mayor James A. Fathens. This innovation in Janesville municipal politics was launched at the meeting of club women held at the Apollo theatre yesterday afternoon when following the addresses by Mayor Fathens, City Attorney W. H. Dougherty, and A. E. Matheson, those present from the different wards assembled in as many different groups and elected a committee of ten from each of the wards to register their names and addresses. They will co-operate with the ward committees of the voters supporting Mayor Fathens and conduct a house to house canvass appealing to all the influence with their husbands, brothers, fathers and sweethearts in behalf of good government and civic decency. Moral issues in the present campaign were emphasized by all three speakers. Mayor Fathens declared that he believed the highest function of the city government was to safeguard the interests of the community. He said that the law enforcement was the first requisite in attaining this object. Law enforcement, and that only, led to the inauguration of a recall campaign, however laudable its supporters might be to admit it. Complaint was made that the policies of the administration hurt business. When the houses of infamy were closed it was their intention to hurt that particular kind of business and these occupations dependent upon its prosecution. The mayor appealed to the women of the city to exercise their influence with their husbands and sons and said he was assured that if they did their part victory would be assured the law and order forces next Tuesday.

"The pertinent questions in this campaign," said City Attorney Dougherty, "are not those of men, not yet their professions or political affiliations, but of the influence behind them. Who and what do they represent, and what is the nature of the support they are receiving? The answer to these questions will determine what they really stand for. The opposition complains of evil conditions that they allege to exist, but nowhere do you find that they give any promise of remedying them if entrusted with the power. When the Mayor ordered the disorderly houses closed and their inmates to leave town he did not do so on the spur of the moment but after careful deliberation. His action was in conformity with the new statute, toward the social evil and was not an isolated one. Similar action has been taken in all the cities of the country that have undergone a civic and moral awakening."

The speaker quoted Dr. Harrington on Milwaukee as a thorough student of the social evil problem, to the effect that segregation is a recognized failure and the argument that disorderly houses are a necessary evil is the hallmark of those who profit from them.

"Our opponents maintain," he said that the administration will have to change its policy on this question. That remains to be seen. The time is coming when no man will dare in a public address to refer to the business aspect of commercial vice."

"I am not afraid of the charge of inconsistency," said Mr. A. E. Matheson in closing his talk. "Consistent people do not develop very much. I have always been conservative on the subject of woman's suffrage but I have come to believe that if the majority of the women of the city want the ballot they should have it. I wish very much that the women of Janesville could vote in the election next Tuesday."

"We must be on our guard against attempts to cloud the real issue. The recallists have made the real issue, that of law against lawlessness, and decency against shame. We have met them on that issue and mean to hold them to it until the end of the campaign. Do not allow yourselves to be troubled or distraught by issues that have no place in it."

"Mayor Fathens is bound to win if we all do our part. Even if you do not have the ballot your influence carries great weight. The men of the city will do what the majority of the women want them to do. Our victory will not be an easy one, but fought with the hardest of struggles."

"I am not disposed to harsh criticism of the business men who dare not take a definite stand in this campaign. His very business may be endangered through a boycott organized by those interests which we oppose. Let your business men know that you will stand by them when they take a stand for good government and that it is to their advantage to do so. Above all make the men realize that they must go to the polls on election day."

The Rev. Dr. Beaton closed the series of speeches with few remarks on the promise that the meeting held forth of a new means by which we might make her influence felt in public affairs as well as in the present campaign. He also directed the first steps toward organization.

MILTON

Milton, July 17.—The picnic of the W. V. I. club was held in the college gym. Tuesday and those in attendance were marooned there from seven to eight o'clock by the most severe electrical storm ever seen here, during which lightning struck the steeple of the Lutheran church and trees were blown across Madison avenue, blocking the highway completely. The heavy rain had lodged grain badly and damaged other crops.

Dr. Perry has finished his vacation and is ready to handle the forceps again. If you have an "acher" phone the good news.

John H. Home of Milwaukee, has been in town this week.

Arch Hadden has bought the Mrs. Watch property on Janesville avenue.

SOUTH FULTON

South Fulton, July 17.—The harvest and haying in this vicinity have been very much hindered by frequent rains.

Alfred Clough had two cattle killed by lightning last week.

Miss Grace Archer of Waterloo, Iowa, is visiting at James Thompson's.

Charles Stark and sisters of Albion, spent Sunday at Albert Stark's.

Mrs. Levi Hubbell has had an additional room added to her house.

Leonard Thompson is spending the week in Edgerton.

A new boiler has been installed in

MILTON JUNCTION

Milton Junction, July 16.—John Monaghan and family spent Sunday with friends at Lima.

Miss Myrtle Judd has accepted a position in Washington, D. C.

C. R. Hill was a business caller at Sullivan, Wis., recently.

J. A. Baker and family spent Sunday at Janesville.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Marsh have gone to Indiana to visit relatives.

Howard Cottrell was home from Walworth Saturday.

Miss Hattie Behnke has gone to her home near Jefferson for a week's visit.

Miss Emma Driver was a Janesville shopper Tuesday.

The members of the Fortnightly club enjoyed a picnic at Mrs. Marquette's cottage at The Grange.

A large number attended the Catholic social held last night on the church lawn.

Miss Kyle of Whitewater is a guest of her sister, Mrs. W. F. Bowers.

EAST CENTER

East Center, July 15.—Joshua City of Janesville and two grandchildren, Gladys and Eugene Crall of Winona, called in this vicinity Sunday evening.

Prof. Frank Kleinheinz of Madison spent Sunday at The Grange.

Mrs. Herman Wilke is confined to her home with sickness.

Miss Nell Langdon has been the guest of Mrs. Will Dixon.

Miss Marion spent Sunday at J. H. Fisher's.

Mrs. Louie Fisher and son Edwin of Janesville, who have been spending some time with Mrs. Clara Dixon have returned home.

ALBANY

Albany, July 14.—D. T. Bennett and daughter of Monroe, visited at the home of his brother, A. R. Bennett, during the week.

Mrs. Lucinda Stephens visited her sister, Mrs. Almira Dodge in Brodhead over Sunday.

The heavy rain and storm last Tuesday afternoon did considerable damage in and around here.

The lightning struck and burned the barn on the old Reuck place between here and Evansville, and it so struck Cliff Knapp's house, setting afire in the attic, but it was discovered and put out not doing very much damage.

Lots of limbs and trees were blown down. It raised the river so we did not have electric lights for two nights. Another heavy rainfall was last night.

Rev. F. L. Roberts of La Crosse filled the pulpit at the M. E. church yesterday morning. Mr. Roberts was an Albany boy, being born and raised here.

Mrs. Wm. Smiley has the misfortune to fall last night and break some of the small bones of the ankle and sever some cords.

Abner Webb returned last Tuesday from Gettysburg, where he is attending the fiftieth anniversary of the battle.

Mrs. E. Little went to a sanatorium last week for treatment.

Mrs. George Larmer and children of Orfordville visited her father today between trains. Mr. Atkinson's condition is about the same.

Scott Mathews and family and sister Mrs. Merle Clawson, all of Milwaukee left for their home Saturday after a week's visit with their brother and family, Claude Mathews.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reese of Janesville visited at Myron Flint's yesterday.

Miss Elma Lindarsten spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in Madison.

Of course we swat the flies, but then that sphere is rather narrow; all loyal, patriotic men should swat the English sparrow. Oh, soak the sparrows with a brick, the sparrows and their litters; Great Britain played a low down trick in sending us those critters. They are the ENGLISH loafers of the air, all SPARROWS honest effort dodging; they do not earn their daily fare, they do not pay for lodging. They're nervy, sassy little brutes that rob the honest tillers; they swipe the costly grains and fruits, and pass up caterpillars. They do not rustle after grubs, like honest birds and thoughtless, so let us fashion wet elm clubs and take the warpath.

These Storms Are Trying on your Roofs, Gutters and Conductors. If they leak, better let me fix them. I am an expert in this line.

They drive our native birds away, the birds that sing and frolic and punish bugs day after day until they have colic. These British birds the farmer hates, and curses as he harrows, so let us rise, like heavyweights, and swat the English sparrows. "America for native birds" should be our motto; let's swat the pauper countries wingings. We want to paralyze the feathered herds from pauper countries winging. We want no birds beneath our flag that pinch our precious cherries; we want no birds that bullyrag our robins and canaries. It's well to swat the flies, I say, and crush them bone and marrow, but we should take an hour a day to swat the English sparrow.

GOOPS By GELETT BURGESS

DAFFY DILLY (Do You Giggle and Sillig?)

I think that you are quite too big

To giggle or sillig.

You take a Goop like Daffy Dilly.

And you expect him to be silly.

But you, although you laugh your fill, Don't sillig, or giggle.

Don't Be A Goop!

Just a Suggestion.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 17, 1873.—Probable Theft: Last night shortly after six o'clock a stranger, evidently a German, called at the Royal Wood's livery stable and hired a horse and buggy, representing that he wished to drive a few miles out into the country to see a relative and that he would not be gone over an hour, as he intended to take the seven-twenty train to Madison. He said he was a resident of Monmouth, and a brewer by occupation. His statements were plausible ones and Mr. Wood let him have the rig without requiring any security. But he failed to return this noon and search around the country revealed that he had taken a northerly course out of the city. Mr. Wood traced the supposed thief as far as Hume's bridge and there lost definite knowledge of the direction that the man took. The man is evidently a German speaking broken English, is apparently between twenty-five and thirty years of age, sandy complexioned, weighs probably 165 pounds and wore a light suit with a straw hat. He took with him a brown horse, six years old, low and of heavy build, and two or three wind puffs on the back of the buggy. Attached to the horse was a top buggy, nearly new, with a red body and gearing, box round behind with a silver plate bearing the name of the manufacturer. The harness is black trimmed with silver tassels. There is every reason to believe that the stranger has stolen Mr. Wood's property though it is possible that he might have been detained in some manner. But if he values his reputation he had better make haste in returning the equipment.

At Myers opera house this evening, Cal Wagner's minstrels will delight the lovers of the burnt cork eccentricities with a program of music and fun combined. Just at this season the intense heat has relaxed our energies and render us only able to enjoy that which causes spontaneous laughter and this entertainment promises to make no mental task of laughing and enjoy one's self.

SPUR OF THE MOMENT

Song of the Grouch.
Why be cheerful?
Why be gay?
Why be happy?
All the day?
Why be smiling?
Why be glad?
When you really
Should be sad?
Why throw bouquets
At your friends?
Flowers all wither,
There it ends.
Why be pleasant
And content?
When you're broke
Or badly bent?

Why be boasting
Of friends' stock
When it's easier
To knock?
Why be adding Charity?
That's poor business—
Yes, siree!
Be a cynic,
Be a gloom,
And when you must
Meet your doom,
Makes no difference
Had to go down to the old uncle's
Though the folks are Glad you're dead.

Signs of the Times.
It is a good thing to hold the family picnic early and then forget it so as to enjoy the rest of the summer. Picnics will happen, of course, in the best of families, but the average family outing is a horrible thing to have to look forward to.

Vincent Aston had an automobile that will go 120 miles an hour. He is one of the few young men in this country who can afford one.

The Diary of a Bonehead.
My wife's cousin and her husband and nine children spent six weeks with us in the city last winter and enjoyed with us the high cost of living to the extent that wife's jewelry had to go down to the old uncle's for a spell and we placed a first mortgage on our horseless piano.

When they parted from us tearfully at the end of their visit they said in that delightfully vague way so often employed by relatives: "You must run down to the old farm and see us for a day or so some fine summer."

Although the invitation was so indefinite that it sounded like a politician's ante-campaign promise, or a woman's vow to "obey" in the marriage contract, we decided to take advantage of it this summer.

After selling our cook stove to buy sufficient gasoline, we motored down to the old farm. That was yesterday. We expected to stay six weeks. We got back tonight.

Never again.
We like our old flat in the city pretty well, where it never gets above 100 in the shade, and the next time we want to take a little excursion in unhappiness or a little fling in misery, we are going to start for Panama in the middle of July and loaf around the equator with the pellagra bug and the yellow fever mite.

Our relatives had sixteen summer boarders who were trying to win back their faded health by living on canned vegetables and dried herring. The name of the old farm is now "Pleasant View," which is a rather remarkable thing in itself, inasmuch as there is no view at all and very little that is pleasant. The rates are $8 a day.

My wife's cousin's husband is a great business man. All of the rooms were rented and I had to sleep in a tent on a cot which closed up like a jackknife about every twenty minutes and removed a porthouse steak from my anatomy. The wife and kids slept in the corner, which was light and well ventilated.

The people who are paying for it seem to be having a good time, probably because they are rich and don't know any better. It certainly is tough to be poor and discriminating, but that is our fix and one night settled our desire for country life.

We found later that our cousin's husband gets all of his milk and farm produce from the city every other Friday, early in the morning before any of the boarders are awake. It is risky enough to accept invitations from friends without rushing in where angels fear to tread and accepting them from relatives.

PLYMOUTH

Plymouth, July 17.—Robby Black of Janesville, is spending a few weeks at his uncle, B. W. Borkenhagen's.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

"I SAVED ANNA."

Each day and each community has its own story of some humble hero or heroine who offered his or her life for others. Many of these never see print. Others are told only in the local papers and do not reach the great world beyond. A few, perhaps, receive mention in the city papers.

That is because such deeds are becoming common. We are taking the words and example of the Nazarene so into the very fiber of our lives that self sacrifice is expected.

One of the latest tales concerns Joseph Dube of New Hartford, Conn. At the age of twenty-one, with all his life before him, this lad lost both his legs in rescuing his cousin, Anna Castonguay, from falling under the wheels of a moving train.

In the hospital later, where he lay in a critical condition, Joseph Dube said quietly:

"I'm satisfied; I saved Anna."

There is high hope for a race, an age or a nation that breeds such men.

You never heard of Joseph Dube before; you may never hear of him again, but do not imagine that such deeds are lost.

Somewhere and somehow is kept an imperishable record of the things that are good, that are pure and high and unselfish. This record will go to make up the song of the ages.

The name of Joseph Dube is written in that book.

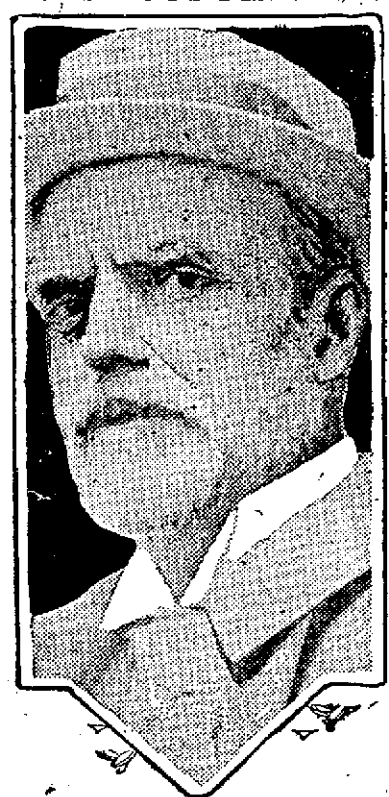

Somewhere and somehow is being reared a temple of God in the city of man. The deed of Joseph Dube is one of the stones in that temple.

Somewhere and somehow is being builded a royal highway through the ages, leading to the era of heaven on earth. Joseph Dube's sacrifice is a milestone in that highway.

He saved more than one life. Humanity is bound together in a thousand unseen ways, and he who rescues another in some sense rescues all men.

I want you to engrave the name of humble Joseph Dube on your heart, and some day, all unconscious to yourself, perhaps, it will help you to save a life, to help a friend or to be a little bit more unselfish, honest and true.

COL. GOETHALS HAS PLEASANT HOME ON ISTHMUS; SURROUNDED BY COOL, WIDE VERANDAS AND SCREENED TO BAR MOSQUITOES

Latest picture of Colonel Goethals, and his home at Culebra on the isthmus.

The home of Colonel Goethals, the builder of the Panama canal, at Culebra is admirably adapted to the hot climate of the canal zone. Wide verandas surrounding the house allow the free circulation of air, and screens completely shut out the mosquitoes. All government buildings in the canal zone have these two features, and because of the continued warfare against the mosquito, yellow fever has been entirely wiped out on the isthmus and malaria is less common than ever before.

Trees and Lightning

The electrical resistance of trees is quite great, a quality which protects them to a considerable degree from lightning stroke. This resistance varies greatly with the character of the tissues and also with the temperature.

This fact results in an annual and daily period of resistance. The cambium layer shows the least electrical resistance, followed by the phloem and sapwood.

HOUSEWIVES CLAIM
FRUIT IS SCARCE

Enormous Rates on Fruits Are Blamed to Scarcity of Pickers—No Outlook for a Decrease in Prices.

People throughout the country are amazed when they read of the terribly high prices on fruits, and many questions are asked why these prices are so high. The housewives are the most concerned, for it is they who are interested in canning the various berries for the coming winter. Some people blame the high prices to the middleman, who happens not to have his foot in it at all this year. Others state that it is due to the small crop, and consequently they find no excuse to make, while still others are confident that the tariff or partly in power are the real cause for the high prices. But the definite cause for the excessive rates is the fact that the fruit growers and truck gardeners find it extremely difficult to hire pickers to obtain the fruit and make it ready for sale. Labor must be blamed at last for this rapid rise in prices. Instead of the other reasons which might have had a hand in the constant increase.

A Janesville housewife was hard to say yesterday: "Fruit is so high this year, that I cannot afford to do any up for winter." This is the statement of many thousands of other women who are discouraged over the high rates.

Wisconsin is a state where many cherries are grown. Sturgeon Bay has a large orchard of cherry trees, which yields a large supply of the cherries used in the Badger state. Because of the difficulty in finding pickers to prepare the fruit, the dealers or growers about Sturgeon Bay and in other orchards, are forced to pay enormous amounts for the help which they do receive. Four cents per box is the price paid now for picking, while at the start of the strawberry season, the growers were only paying two cents per quart. The farmer found the rise to be absolutely necessary, and this excessive charge in the cost of preparing the fruit, together with the scarcity of the pickers, accounts for the high prices.

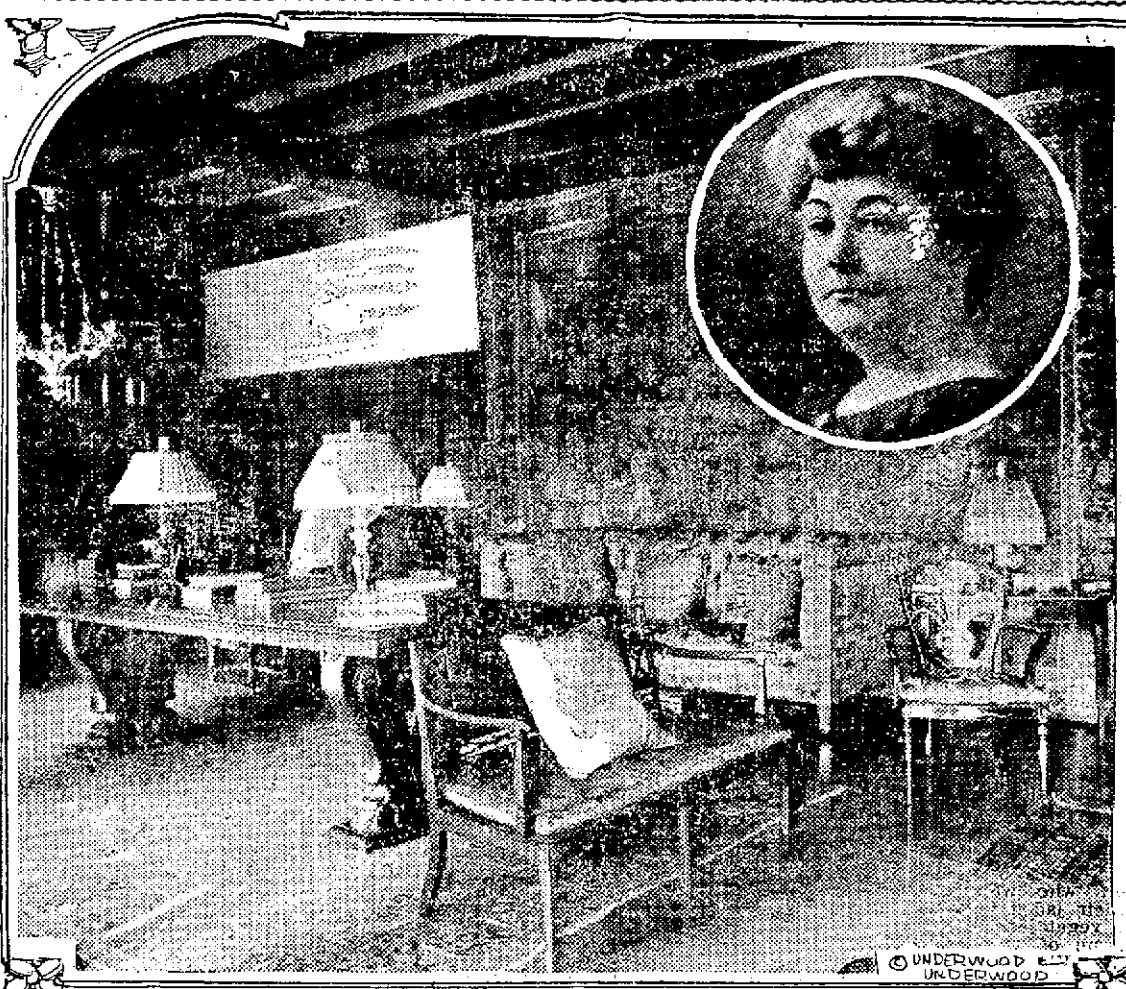

In addition to the high rate paid for pickers, the cost of hiring a team to transport the products is enormous. It is therefore evident that it is the labor which is affecting the high cost of constant rise in fruit prices and for no other reason, and unless pickers become more willing to work for two cents, the prices are sure to remain as they are now. According to the way things look at present, prices will not fall on fruits, but will continue to rise. So, it is now, that the housewives better secure their winter store, and not wait until prices are beyond their means. The growers are not happy over the losses which they have had to suffer. Children, and especially foreign lads, have been the mainstay as pickers, it being utterly impossible to hire the older laboring class in this line of work. The children, and more the young girls, must be given much credit for the work which they have done while picking. Many of the growers are also planning on giving up the production of berries, and turn to some other gardening work, in order that they might clear a decent profit. Conditions may change, but it is very doubtful, and especially so this year.

The international claims commission, composed of Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice of Canada; Andre Fromageot of France, president of the tribunal, and Chandler P. Anderson, formerly counselor of the U. S. state department, is now sitting at Washington. It is engaged in settling disputes of private individuals who have claims against the United States and Canada. Some of the claims date back as far as 1812 and there has been no settlement since the last commission sat in 1853. The claims relate to the collision of American and Canadian vessels, seizure of Canadian sealing boats and other subjects.

THE GIRL from PROSPERITY

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

(Copyright 1910, By Benj. B. Hampton.)

WHEN James E. Carroll, his attire fully keyed up to his pink tie, swaggered in to the Hotel Bellevue barber shop, the boss barber, loafing over at the table of Bessie Williams, grinned in spite of his present ill humor.

"Pipe the village cut-up," he observed.

The Manicure Girl surveyed the newcomer with a keen eye.

"No, Billy," she replied, "it's the village sport."

"Whatever he is," insisted Billy, "he's a Hick and looking for a ten-cent shave."

"Again the girl surveyed the newcomer critically."

"No," she once more dissented, "I'll bet you the size of the tip that he tips you."

"The same which would be a fine and wise bet for me to make, I think not," observed Billy, and added a forcible word or so under his breath as he started forward.

For Mr. James E. Carroll, having looked down the line of Greeks and Italians who stood invitingly at their empty chairs, gave a glance at the only American barber in the place, and climbed into the only chair which had no attendant.

"I'll take a round trip," he affably observed as Billy slipped the sleeves of the shaving apron over his arms.

"Shave, sir?" coldly inquired Billy, who, nevertheless, had understood perfectly what his customer meant.

"This whole howling hippodrome," said young Mr. Carroll, unabashed.

"Just watch me make this fresh wop's pocket change shrink down to the edge of his return ticket," growled Billy to the Manicure Girl as he made a pretext to go past her table for fresh towels.

"I wouldn't have your ingrowing grinch for money," laughed the girl.

"You would if you ached to furnish a flat and got turned down every time you mentioned it," he complained.

"I told you that was barred," she informed him. "I think I see myself in an East Harlem flat, with cheese-cloth curtains on the front windows and garbage can on the fire escape, counting how many wienerswursts we get for a dime."

It was in consequent savagery that Billy began upon the task of giving his country customer "a round trip."

He cut that heavy young gentleman's hair, and singed and shampooed and dandruffed it, he shaved him and massaged his head and his face, he put upon him franches of every bottled thing in his possession, then he grinned, yanked up the chair, jerked off the towels and handed over his largest check. But Mr. Carroll was scarcely interested.

"If that all you can do?" he asked.

"We have a chiropodist, but he's not on duty just now," snarled Billy; "while you're waiting, though, you can get manicured."

"For manicure, I've heard about 'em," said Mr. Carroll; "and just as a sporting proposition I'm going to sample a sample of every thing there is in New York."

"Just go right ahead and see if New York cares," Billy advised him.

"I don't care whether New York cares," returned Mr. Carroll, largely, "and that's where I've got the best of New York."

As a matter of living up to that largeness he presented Billy with half a dollar, then he swaggered across the shop to the cashier's desk, flaunting a twenty dollar bill in his hand and glancing with speculative assurance at the row of manicure girls.

Tess, who was quite universal in her tastes, used her large eyes freely, but with the usual negative effect. Nobody could be persuaded to believe them.

Instead of succumbing to the girl who owned them, Mr. Carroll's gaze roved right on over her head to the receptively demure Miss Williams.

"Mr. Smarty from Smartville," commented Tess with a toss of her head.

"I don't want him," retorted Miss Williams. "If I draw Johnny Fresh I'll give him the salting down of his life. It'll be a real quiet convention we'll hold, with me in the steam roller part."

A preliminary to this process, when Mr. Carroll sat down at her table she spread out both his hands before her and surveyed them critically; then she smiled with an apparent attempt to conceal it; then she looked demurely up.

Some uncomfortable thought held him silent throughout the entire operation, checking any desire for conversation and killing any inclination whatsoever toward flippancy.

When he got up to go he looked at the change dubiously, then at the girl, then back at the change, and again grew red. His dilemma was obvious. He did not know whether or not it was the proper thing to tip a lady. Sometimes Miss Williams took tips and sometimes she refused them. This time she accepted before one was really offered.

"Thank you," said she very sweetly.

He pushed a quarter toward her tentatively, and she swept it nonchalantly into the little drawer of her table.

"Thank you," she said again, still very sweetly.

Those were the only four words that had been spoken during the entire event.

"How did you tame him, Bess?" asked the other girl.

"Made him see the size of his hands," explained Miss Williams with a shrug. "You can do that with any of them that have big ones, and after that they'll lay down and roll over and jump through hoops at the mere glance of command."

The next day he came in again, but with not nearly so much assurance. Again he took Billy's chair, but there was very little aggressiveness about him.

"What will you have a sample of to-day?" asked Billy.

"Shave," said Mr. Carroll, wearily, as he lay back in the chair.

When Billy turned him loose he went over to Miss Williams and spread out his hands upon her table, dropping on it her with a dead-tired air.

"You don't want me to treat your nails again," she objected.

"Sure," he said. "I came in on purpose."

"This is one of the good things you can overdo," she told him. "If I'd give those nails the full course so soon you'd have to get a new set."

"He was quite dismal about it."

"Can't you fuss around with them a little bit, then?" he inquired. "I'm so lonesome I could go to jail for company."

"Maybe I could finish yesterday's job a little," she returned. "It would be cheating, but I don't mind," and she studied them carefully.

The fact of the matter was that Mr. James E. Carroll was quite palpably unhappy, and the Manicure Girl, who always wore her claws unsheathed for "fresh" people, could not withhold comfort from unhappy ones.

"What's the matter? Hasn't New York been clabby with you?" she asked, as she went gingerly to work.

"No," he complained, "the town's too slow. There's more fun out in Prosperity, Indiana, where I came from."

"That isn't what ails you. There's a girl back in Prosperity."

"There's half a dozen of them," he grinned.

"Yes?" she inquired, and looked him over carefully.

"There's only one. I'll put a little bet down on it; a bag of peanuts against a package of chewing gum."

He looked a long time at the Manicure Girl's imported pompadour, then he called a boy and handed him a quarter.

"Bring a package of chewing gum," he ordered.

That's when Miss Williams began not to dislike him so much.

"Yes," he went on by and by. "There is just one girl back in Prosperity, that is, one worth mentioning, and I'd give a hundred dollars if she were here."

"So much as a hundred left?" she asked, in apparent surprise, "and you here two days?"

"It does me pretty fast," he confessed, smiling, "but I'm good for a few days longer. I brought between three and four hundred dollars with me."

"Gee!" exclaimed Miss Williams. "What will they do for a circulating medium out there?"

"Oh, there's some left I guess," he told her, "but not among the gang. You see, I won this in a poker game, the biggest one we ever had in town."

"My, what a wicked little sport!" she gasped. "I guess you're the horrible example in Prosperity. I guess they won't let you come to the church societies, nor the husking bees, nor anything. What does the girl think of it?"

"She doesn't know anything about it," he returned rather soberly. "If she found out, I don't think she'd like it very much."

Miss Williams liked him even better for the seriousness with which he considered this phase of the matter.

"Of course she's pretty," she suggested by and by. It was good to see his face light up.

"I call her Reddy, but her hair isn't really red," he explained. "It's dark brown, that seems to flare up copper colored sometimes when the sun shines through he gets through," growled Billy.

It did not seem to happen right at once, however. Every time James E. Carroll came in he looked more prosperous, and he told the Manicure Girl each time of how much money he was making as a "grain and stock operator." Every time it was more and more. He didn't exactly boast about it; he was only gleeful in a large, childish way, and it is doubtful if he gloated to anyone else as he did to Miss Williams. He had constituted her his confidante from the beginning, and seemed to feel it a solemn duty, as well as a joy, to come in and let her know his progress. It was strange, too, to see his transition from a country boy to an all-rounder. His clothing now was up to the minute, his talk up to the dot; but in place of the rugged pink and brown of his cheeks he now had a massaged complexion, and there were pouches under his eyes.

The Manicure Girl came in one day laughing and still half vexed.

"Guess where I saw James E. Carroll," she said to Tess; "in a big red racer with three stunning chorus girls. I was with Frank — you know him; head rasher over at Churley's."

"It's Plunger Jimmy Carroll," Frank told me.

"Gee!" said Billy. "Has he got so far along that Broadway knows him?"

"Sure," said Frank. "He's the hottest member on the main stem. He's just Jimmy, along the line. All the late places know him. How's that for a pace?"

"He's got the quickest education of anybody ever I saw," commented Tess. "If he were mine I'd have a sparkling rock as big as the head of a hat pin out of him."

"You've had plenty of chances," retorted Miss Williams, "but I don't notice that Tiffany effect on you."

Mr. Carroll came in the next day, beaming.

"You ought to see my new car," he told the Manicure Girl as he sat down at her table.

"I saw it yesterday," she snapped. "You were peddling a fine load of shrimps."

"Weren't they the class of the card?" he laughed, and seemed quite proud of it. "That flossy blonde on the outside was Beauty Phillips, the sensation of The Pink Anarchy. She's going to star next season, and Angel Jimmy may back the show."

"Fine for Beauty Phillips," said the Manicure Girl, and then she was angrily silent for a few minutes.

"Look here, Mr. James E. Carroll," she suddenly demanded; "when did you write last to the girl in Prosperity?"

"By George, I—I intended to write her last night," he stammered. "I—I haven't been answering her letters as promptly as I ought, and that's a fact."

"When—did—you—write—to—her?" she insisted.

"Well, it's been—why, confound it, it's over three weeks!" he finally confessed.

"And then I'll bet it was on one page," she snapped back at him. "You told her you were too busy to write, only just those few lines, but would write more to-morrow."

That time she made him blush.

"Now," she sternly went on, "you go right out of here and write to that girl; and keep it up, or don't ever come back."

"Cross my heart, hope to die if I don't," he promised.

The next time he came in he was leading a particularly ugly bulldog.

"Isn't that a lovely mut?" he asked as he tied the end of the chain to his chair.

"What's it good for besides killing?" she asked, eyeing the creature with supreme disfavor.

"It's to make an already peerless beauty look still more like a queen," he told her, complacently. "I examined something like two tons of dogs to find this specimen. I thought it to be taking my place in the honk wagon alongside of Beauty Phillips, when I'm busy throwing a harpoon into the wheat pit."

"Did you write that letter yet?" she demanded.

"Yes," he answered shortly.

"It's about time to write another one, isn't it?"

"No," he replied, defiantly. "I'm not going to write any more."

She looked at him and shook her head, but she said nothing, and her very silence angered him.

"What's the use?" he hotly went on, and she divined that, after all, his anger was more at himself than at her. "Why should I hide the facts from myself any longer. I've grown away from Prosperity."

"I should say you had," she agreed. "If Prosperity could know how you've changed for the worse, it wouldn't recognize you on the street."

"It's not my world any more," he continued, paying no attention to her interruption, "nor the people are not of my world."

All this was an apparently set speech of defense.

"So you hinted before," she reminded him; "but that doesn't keep you from writing to the girl."

He hesitated a moment.

merry wag you must be when you're going good."

"Regular clown," he grinned. "Just for that I'll make you listen to my real name."

From his pocket he drew a stamped and addressed letter and pointed to the "James E. Carroll" written in the corner under the livefish card.

"And here's the girl," he said, pointing to the address with a strange combination of affluence and asperity.

"Elizabeth Ruth Emery. Don't you think it's some pumpkins of a name?"

"It's a shine to Elizabeth E. Carroll; and for that I suppose I get paid double."

"You sure do," he agreed. "I'm writing her a dandy letter. I'm telling her all about the good business I'm in and how much money I'm making. Why, say, do you know I'm ahead over five hundred dollars since I saw you?"

The Manicure Girl pushed back his hand, and hastily reached down his hat from the hook overhead.

"Run!" she exclaimed. "Get away quick before they find out you've got it, or they'll take it away if they have to strangle you."

He merely grinned.

"Oh, I don't know," he said, confidently. "I've noticed that the people who do gouge its money out of New York, and keep it, come from places like Prosperity, Indiana. There's a lot more where this five hundred grew, and I'm going to pick it."

"Poor child," she commiserated. "I can see your bumps on the way."

"So," he admitted, "but let me tell you, little lady, I'll be having the time of my life until they reach me, and if they reach me, I've made my three hundred stretch a long, long way."

He held his head high, and his big shoulders square as he walked out, and Billy snorted; but he got no satisfaction out of the Manicure Girl.

"Hick, isn't he, Billy? Yap, I guess! Also a pin-head and a few other things; but just the same he came here to spend three hundred dollars, and he's been here a week, and he's got about six hundred of it left. I call that real Marathon blood myself. If you'd go down and turn a few tricks like that you could come down to my daily toil in a buzz-wagon."

"He'll be down on the Bowersy panhandling before he gets through," growled Billy.

It did not seem to happen right at once, however. Every time James E. Carroll came in he looked more prosperous, and he told the Manicure Girl each time of how much money he was making as a "grain and stock operator." Every time it was more and more. All this was an apparently set speech of defense.

"So you hinted before," she reminded him; "but that doesn't keep you from writing to the girl."

He hesitated a moment.

"But her letters do," he finally said. "I got one from her yesterday. It was about nothing but the new coat of paint on the Baptist Church, and about there being an epidemic of measles in the town, and about—"

"That's about far enough," she told him, furiously angry. "Awful drivel, isn't it? I can see the little fool sitting down to write about such trifling things in her ignorance. Red hair I think you said she had, and red cheeks, and you called her Reddy. Coarse, ignorant, country person, no doubt. Well, I don't blame you for shaking her, now that you have got up among the real people, real ladies like Beauty Phillips and her crowd, and real gentlemen of the sort that loaf around the hotel bars on Broadway. You're right to cut her dead right now. Why, she might some time come to New York, and if she should happen to meet you on Broadway when you were with some of your swell friends, and should nod to you, you'd be disgraced for life. I'll bet she'd be a scream on Broadway, with her funny clothes and her funny little hat, and her red complexion."

"That'll be about all," he said, as he jumped up and unwound his dog chain, and his face had turned suddenly pale. "My ideas have changed somewhat about things back in Prosperity, but I can't stand for having that girl roasted, even in a joke."

It was over a month before he came in again, and the Manicure Girl had missed him. He was nervous and abstracted. With the shrewd eyes of Miss Williams upon him, he kept thinking of one thing while he talked of another, asked questions without listening to the answers, then asked the same questions again. "How much did you lose?" she finally asked him. He stared at her in wonder. "How did you know? Where did you hear?" he slowly questioned.

"You've been telling me ever since you came in," she said.

"I expect I have," he admitted. "Well, hey got some in jumps and gobs. For the past month I think I was about the only bull in a bear market. I went down the greased incline so fast it smoked from the friction. The first of this week I had to sell both automobiles."

"I can see the headlight and the glimmer studied watch going next," she commented, with a shake of her head. "I suppose they've about got all that automobile money by now."

"Suppose again," he retorted. "They did get nearly all of it at first, but the market changed at last, and I've made a little money since. If I'd close out now I'd have at least three thousand."

"Tell me where it is and I'll go get it for you," offered the Manicure Girl, hastily. "You take that money and go right back to Prosperity, Indiana; buy the village dry goods emporium; marry that girl; settle down and get fat. Then this experience will have done you good."

He shook his head.

"I can never go back there," he said, "never! That's not my world, I tell you. I'll make back the money I lost. I've learned a few tricks in the last couple of weeks."

"Oh, New York will educate you," she owned; "but, you know, college graduates don't amount to much."

"Never mind," he insisted. "I've played this game to win before, and I can do it again. Watch me."

"You'd better send at least one thousand dollars of that money to the girl back home to plant under the cellar stairs," she suggested.

She watched him narrowly, and then she smiled to herself. The mention of the girl in Prosperity did not seem to annoy him this time.

"That much money wouldn't scare her, at any rate," he said, smiling. "She's rather well-to-do for a country town. She's an orphan and lives with her married sister. But don't you worry about that thousand. I can use that to elegant advantage myself."

The next time she saw him was on the street. He tried to pass on by with a nod, but she called to him and he came back reluctantly.

"What's the matter with you?" she demanded. "You look like a yesterday's three-cent bunch of soup vegetables."

He glanced down at himself ruefully. His clothes needed brushing and pressing, his shoes needed polishing, his face needed shaving.

"I'll give you four guesses," he offered, with an attempt at his old gaudy.

"I only need one," she replied. "You wouldn't listen to your Aunt Bessie, and they got you."

"Yes," he admitted, "they got me and they got me good."

"What are you going to do?"

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHEN A BARGAIN IS NOT A BARGAIN.

ONE upon a time a prospective bride and groom went house hunting. They knew just about what they wanted, and they knew just exactly what they could afford to pay for it. As usual, it was very difficult to reconcile the two.

The end of the campaign found them with three apartments under consideration. Two of these were for rent at just the price they had decided they could afford—$30 a month. The third rented for $37. Of course the first two didn't exactly suit, and the third was just what they wanted. They debated long over the question, and finally decided to take the third. And this was the consideration on which they based their decision: "The $37 apartment is so much better value for the money that it seems foolish not to take it. It's a great deal more than $7 better than the others. The others are just what you'd expect for the money, but that one is a bargain."

And so they took the desired apartment and paid the extra rent out of the fund they had planned to save. And whenever their consciences pricked them for spending more than they could afford, they pointed out the open fireplace and the shower bath and the attractive wall papers to each other, and repeated, "It's such a bargain, it would have been foolish to miss it." I think their viewpoint on values is about as typical as it is unfortunate. A bargain is not a bargain when you can't afford it.

The first criterion on all expenditures should be, "can I afford it?" the second, "is it a good value?" I was most interested the other day to hear a young minister announce that his church was going to cut down expenses. "We've been mulling up a deficit each year," he said, "and it isn't right. It isn't right for individuals and it isn't right for churches. It must stop. We've tried to make our income fit our expenses and we haven't done it; now we shall try to make our expenses fit our income." Whereupon he went through the budget with the financial committee and struck out certain expenses such as a church calendar, and some of the singing, which had hitherto been regarded as necessities. Some of the committee protested. The calendar was such a good thing they said, and the singer was a fine artist and not expensive considering her value. "Nothing is good," said the minister, "and anything is expensive that you cannot afford." Of course there is another side to the question—that one sometimes has to spend money in order to get it. But that applies more largely to business than personal affairs, and where there is one over-expending with that aim, there are one hundred over-expending simply for personal gratification. "That apartment is a good value," and "I simply ought to have a new rug, this one is disgraceful," and "How nice it would be to have a player piano to educate the children in good music," etc., etc., are perfectly good considerations in their place, but their place is after "can we afford it," and not before.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I have read your answer to so many of the letters that I have just fallen in love with YOU. Your advice is always so good. There isn't an evening that I don't read your letters and mother reads them too.

(1) Mrs. Thompson I am eighteen years of age and am a fair blond and weight about one hundred and forty, and have a dear sister who is a brunette and doesn't weigh as much as I do. Do you think I should mind any one telling me I am fat? Which are you, blonde or brunette? I wish you would personally because you seem to be so sweet and friendly looking in the picture.

(2)—A boy friend is just as nice a boy as I ever knew, but he is younger than I am and I hate to go out with him. He has told his mother how much he thought of me, because I have heard it from her through some of the older ladies and she laughs at him; so does my mother. I just want to know what you think about it. He is away this summer and I have had several cards and letters from him. I don't go with any of the boys for much.

(3) Do you think I am too young to teach a primary Sunday school class? With best wishes.

First let me thank you for your pretty letter, my dear girl friend. I hope I have a great many lovers like you, and if I didn't return the love I wouldn't be giving advice to those who need it. I am sure you are the kind of girl who takes her real problems to her mother, for mother is always one's best friend though sometimes it's best to get the opinion of an outsider.

(1) If you are happy and happy and good to look at, you don't care what people say about "fat," do you? I wouldn't. My hair is turning quite gray.

Some day this boy will grow up and "while he will probably remain your very good friend he will see another girl younger than him self who will seem just right to him for a wife. It is good for him to have a good girl friend like you, and it is good for you to know a nice boy of this sort. I would discourage any presents from him, however, unless it is some very little thing that will not make you feel under obligations to him. Ask his mother to speak to him about it. Also, cultivate other boy friends and let him know it. It will be best for him to understand that you consider him only a lad and that you feel like a big sister toward him.

(3) No. Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am a girl past fifteen years of age. I about five months ago I met a young man who is about eight years older than I. He has taken me to several entertainments and car-riding. He has said he would wait for me if I would be his when I was twenty. Will you advise me?

(2)—This young man is going to Europe soon and he has often asked me what I wanted him to bring me from there. Would it be himannered to tell him?

PONY GIRL. (1)—I wouldn't take him seriously, my dear. By the time he is five years older he is apt to think he is in love with half a dozen other girls.

(2)—Tell him you will be pleased with anything he brings.

ters personally, unless a stamp be enclosed.

I take this means of thanking the many women who have written so far for their words of encouragement and praise, also for the really splendid suggestions they have sent in.

While to date I have received over sixty letters, I am not yet satisfied. I want more. I would like to hear if possible from every woman reader of this paper. To have each woman reader give me her opinion of the exchange, what she thinks of it personally and how she thinks it can be used to further serve the interests of the women readers of this paper. For that is what the managers of this paper want. To start an exchange that will be a real service, a genuine help to its country and city women. An exchange that will cater to the masses, to our everyday people, to the class of people who often lack the time to do a real service.

That embraces the motto, "does it not?" For, truthfully speaking, is it fair to John to spend recklessly the money he works so hard to earn?

It would be a fine thing to always be able to spend with a lavish hand could one remain forever young, but when the day comes—as come it will—when John can no longer go out and demand the money he draws now, what then? Think it over. What then?

If this proposed Women's Exchange can help to put a dent in the high cost of living by enabling the home women to earn money, or if it's what we want. Or if it can help to suggest to any woman ways or means to aid her in running her home a little more smoothly, a little more successfully, why it is a thing to be desired.

This city and our surrounding territory can successfully operate a Women's Exchange if the women only say so. Now I want co-operation. Do I get it? It isn't going to cost but a two-cent stamp to write and say what you think about it, what you could best at home in your leisure moments to help swell the family income.

Now I personally am very much opposed to a woman who has a home and husband, going out and earning. I realize that necessity is the mother of a different case. When one circles a point they get a different view from every side, consequently we none of us should say what another has or has not ought to do.

Each and every one of us must live their own life. And candidly speaking if we'd all put a little more time in on this really important work, wouldn't it be wise? Wouldn't it be wise if we'd all make the resolution, and making it keep it—that we will all keep so busy minding our own business that not one moment can we spare to keep tab on our friends. Now this is getting away from our exchange talk isn't it?

I want—please—to receive a letter from every woman reader of this paper concerning the starting of an Exchange.

I am going to publish a list of the names of the women in favor of this project in the very near future. Won't you write today and have your name on the list? Address all letters to "Women's Clearing House," care Gazette.

SUMMER DESSERTS.

There are any number of flavors and kinds of gelatine desserts on the market which, by the addition of boiling water, are ready, when cold, to serve with cream and sugar. These desserts are good and easy to prepare, and have two qualifications which make them popular; but one tires of things too easy and unvaried.

Banana Cream.—Beat the whites of two eggs slightly, and add one-fourth of a cup of powdered sugar and, gradually, three-fourths of a cup of hot cream. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens, then add two tablespoonsful of gelatine soaked in half a cup of cold water and two-thirds of a cup of sugar.

of ice water and add the mashed pulp of four bananas and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Stir until the mixture begins to thicken, then fold in the whip from three and a half cups of cream. Turn into a mold and chill thoroughly. This is perhaps too expensive for every day use, unless it is the fortunate one who lives on a farm and has all the cream one desires.

Frangipani Pie.—Make and roll out to a fourth of an inch in thickness a good rich pastry. Cut the size of layer cake, using a pan for a marker.

Bake three of these crusts and put them together with sweetened, fla-avored whipped cream. Any fruit may be added to the cream, if desired, or nuts may be used for variety. Strawberries are especially nice for this pie. A cupful of berries crushed and added to the cream makes a delicious flavor.

Fruit Blanc Manger.—Mix well two tablespoonsful of cornstarch and half a cup of sugar; add to a pint of hot milk and cook until smooth, thick and the raw taste of the starch is removed,

then add a beaten egg, and when cold pour over any fruit. Serve with cream or a thin custard.

whole wheat bread. If the crust is made on Saturday and the cherries picked and ready for the pie it is very quickly made and baked while washing the breakfast dishes. It is better to have the pastry at the mid-day meal rather than at night. The iced tea can be used better with a cold than a hot meal when taken in moderation. Iced coffee may be used if preferred.

Supper.
Ham en Casserole
Potatoes au Gratin
Bread and Butter—Horse Radish.
Hot Cheese Wafers

The casserole may be prepared Saturday, and after luncheon Sunday put it into a slow oven where it will need no watching. The potatoes may all be prepared and in the baking dish and when ready to prepare supper ten or fifteen minutes will heat the potatoes and brown them. Of course the salad is prepared the day before and ready in the refrigerator at supper time. The oven will be hot for the potatoes so it is an easy matter to heat the cheese wafers. The after-dinner or supper coffee is better served hot.

Ham en Casserole.
Material—Smoked ham, 2 inches thick; one slice, canned tomatoes, two cans, or four fresh sliced ones; one sweet green pepper, one bay leaf, one small sliced onion and six whole cloves.

Directions—Select the cut from near the center of the ham; trim the edges neatly, removing most of the fat, and lay in the casserole. Over this the canned or sliced tomatoes, then add the chopped pepper, sliced onion, bay leaf and cloves. Cover and set into very moderate oven and bake one and a half or two hours. Serve from the dish in which it is cooked or by using a pancake turner remove the meat without breaking to a heated platter, pouring the thickened, strained sauce around it. This particular dish is much easier served in this manner. Garnish with watercress or parsley. En Casseroles are covered baking dishes and are almost essential for meats, poultry and game that re-

Luncheon.
Lettuce and Cheese Sandwiches.
Fresh Raspberry Jam Beet Pickles
Cherry Pie
Iced Tea with Mint.
This luncheon is easily prepared, making the sandwiches of brown or quire long, slow cooking. Use them also for fragouts of all kinds, stews, the cheap cuts of meat, baking fruits and puddings which require long, slow cooking. They are great economizers in time and material and the food is far superior in flavor.

Material—Potatoes, boiled, six; cream, one cup; flour, one table-spoon; eggs, yolks three; stock or milk, one cup; butter, two table-spoons; grated cheese, six table-spoons; salt, one teaspoon; paprika, one-half teaspoon; sweet pepper, red and green, one each.

Directions—Rub butter and flour together until smooth in the fry pan, add stock and cream and stir until it boils, take from the fire, add the yolks well beaten, cheese, and seasonings.

Put a layer of this sauce in the bottom of a baking dish, sprinkle over this some of the pepper chopped fine, then a layer of the potatoes, sliced, another layer of sauce and pepper, and so continue, having the last layer sauce; sprinkle bread crumbs and cheese of butter and bake in a quick oven until brown. Serve in the dish in which it was baked.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

BY FRANCIS JOYCE KENNEDY

A few weeks back in writing one of the Everyday Talks I made mention of having received three letters concerning the starting of a Women's Exchange here in Janesville. Since then the letters have been coming in thick and fast. It would be impossible to acknowledge all letters personally, unless a stamp be enclosed.

MID-SUMMER C

WE have never attempted a mid-summer sale quite so large in its scope so many radical reductions were as necessary as right now. In the season. This fact, combined with the unprecedented low prices should be light. These two reasons have produced an opportunity of real value. This does not mean that you are privileged to choose from a few odds and ends of merchandise. You will never have another opportunity to secure so many choice bargains.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS.—Father has discovered a brand new Remedy.—Released July 17.

THE SECRET OF LONESOME COVE

BY
SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS
Author of
AVERAGE JONES, ETC.

A sudden thought struck into the heart of Sedgwick. "Be sensible, can't you?" he exclaimed. "What do you want with a pickaxe and spade?" "My wants are few and small. If you haven't a pick, two spades will do. In fact, they'll be better. I was merely sticking to the text of my Hamlet."

His shoulders slumped, his jaw slackened, and as his figure warped into the pose of the grave-digger he wheeled out the spade again. He visioned the wet soil of Annalaka burying-ground, heaped above a loose-hashed pine box, within which went forward the untimely processes of earth reclaiming its own.

"Good God! Is it that?" he muttered. The mummur straightened up. "In plain prose, I possess two spades," he inquired. "What do you want with a pickaxe and spade?"

Speechless, Sedgwick went out into the dark, presently returning with the tools. Kent took them out and disposed them on the ground.

"Get in," he directed. "If we had to do this, Kent," said Sedgwick shuddering in his seat, "why haven't we done it before?"

"The other turned on the power," "You're on the wrong track as usual," he remarked. "It couldn't be done before."

"Well, it can't be done now," cried the artist in sudden sharp exclamation. "I won't do it. Stop the car, Kent!"

Kent's voice took an ominously deliberate measure. "Listen," said he; "I am going through with this—now—tonight. If you wish to withdraw, I will not stop you."

"That's enough," growled the artist. "No man alive can say that to me." The car slowed up. "I beg your pardon, Frank," said Kent. "We're told us that the house is occupied by an old sleepless asthmatic who spends half her nights in her window overlooking the graves."

"The car shot forward again. 'Is that all?' asked Kent. 'Isn't it enough?' 'Hardly. We're not going within miles of Annalaka.'"

"Then our night's work is not—?" Kent could feel his companion revolt at the unuttered word, and supplied it for him.

"Grave robbery. It is." "Where?" "In a private burying-ground on the Blair estate."

"Wilfrid Blair's grave? When was the funeral?" "This morning. I was among those present, though I don't think my name will be mentioned in the papers."

"Why should you have been there?" "Oh, set it down to vulgar curiosity," said Kent.

"Probably you'd say the same if I asked you the motive for this present expedition. I suppose you fully appreciate the chance we are taking?"

"Didn't I tell you it was rather more than a life-and-death risk?" "Something cold touched Sedgwick's hand in the darkness. His fingers closed around a flask. "No, no Dutch courage for me. Where is this place?"

"On Sunday's creek, some fourteen miles from the Nook as the motor-car flies."

"Fourteen miles," repeated Sedgwick musingly, following a train of thought that suddenly glowed, a beacon-light of hope across his mind. "Have some connection with the dead woman of the cove, the woman who wore her jewels?" His fingers gripped and sank into Kent's hand. "Chet, for the love of heaven, tell me! Is she one of these Blair?"

"No nonsense, Sedgwick," returned the other sternly. "You're to act—yes, and think—under orders till the night's job is done."

"There was silence for nearly half an hour, while the car slipped, ghost-like, along the wet roadway. Presently it turned aside and stopped.

"Foot work now," said Kent. "Take the spades and follow."

He himself, leading the way, carried a coil of rope on his shoulders. For miles they waded across soaked meadows, until the whisper of rain upon water came to his ears.

"Keep close," directed his guide, and preceded him down a steep bank. The stream was seen for a moment, emerging on the farther side they scrambled up the other bank into a thicker darkness, where Sedgwick, colliding and waiting, a tiny bar of light appeared. It swept across huddled and half-obscured mounds, marked only by the carpet of myrtle—that faithful of whose mission it is to garland the graves of the forsaken and the forgotten—stone whitely back from the headstone of the old slave-trader, came to a rest upon a fresh garish ridge of earth, all pesty and yellow in the rain, and abruptly died.

"Too dangerous to use the lantern," murmured Kent. "Take the near end and dig."

Delving, even in the most favorable circumstances, is a fairly stern test of wind and muscle. In the pitch blackness, under such nerve-shaking conditions, it was an ordeal. Both men, fortunately, were in hard training. The heavy soil flew steadily and fast. Soon they were waist deep. Kent, in low voice, bade his fellow toiler stop.

"Mustn't wear ourselves out at the start," he said. "Take five minutes' rest."

At the end of three minutes, Sedgwick was groping for his spade. "I've got to go on, Chet," he gasped. "The silence and loneliness are too much for me."

"It's just as well," assented his commander. "The clouds are breaking, worse luck. And some one might possibly be up and about in the house. Go to it!"

With a thud which rang up his heart, Kent's iron struck upon wood. Both men stood, frozen into attitudes of attention. No sound came from the darkness.

"Easy now," warned Kent, after he judged it safe to continue. "I thought that Jim dug deeper than that. Spade it out gently. And feel for the handles."

"I've got one," whispered Sedgwick. "Climb out, then, and pass me down the rope."

As Sedgwick gained the earth's level, the moon, sailing from behind a cloud, poured a flood of radiance between the tree trunks. Kent's face, as he raised it from the grave, stretching out his hand for the cord, was ghastly, but his lips smiled encouragement.

"All right! One minute, now, and we're safe." "Safe!" repeated the other. "With that opened grave! I shall never feel safe again."

From between the earthen walls Kent's voice came, muffled. "Safe as a church," he averred, "from the minute that we have the coffin. Take this end of the rope. Got it. Now this one. It's fast, fore and aft. Here I come."

With a leap he clambered out of the excavation. He took one end of the rope from Sedgwick's hand. "All ready to haul?" he inquired in matter-of-fact tones.

"Wait. What are we going to do with this—this thing?" demanded his laborer. "We can never get it to the surface."

A low chuckle sounded from the shrubbery back of them. The resurrectionists stood, stricken.

"An owl," whispered Sedgwick at length. "No," replied Kent in the same tone. Then, in full voice, and with vivid urgency, "Haul!"

Up came the heavy casket, bumping and grating. Even through the rope Sedgwick felt, with horror, the tumbling of the helpless sodden body within. With a powerful effort Kent swung his end upon the mound. The lantern flashed. By its gleam Sedgwick saw Kent striving to force his spade-edge under the coffin lid to pry it loose. The chuckle sounded again.

"That's enough," said a heavy voice, with a suggestion of mirthful appreciation. "Sheriff Len Schlager stepped from behind a tree. He held a revolver on Kent. Sedgwick made a swift motion and the muzzle swung accurately on him."

"Steady, Frank," warned Kent anxiously. "I'm steady enough," returned the other. "What a fool I was not to bring a gun."

"Oh, no," contradicted the scientist. "Of what use is my gun? We're in the light, and he is in the shadow."

"So you've got a gun on you, eh?" remarked the sheriff, his chuckle deepening. "I didn't say so."

"No; but you gave yourself away. Hands up, please. Both of you." For hands went up in the air. Kent's face, in the light, was very downcast, but from the far corner of his mouth came the faintest ghost of a whistle melody—all in a minor and the musician spoke in rapid tones.

"Attention! La ruse est bonne. Quant au donner le coup de pied, battezle a terre."

"What's that gibberish?" demanded Schlager. "Very well," said Sedgwick quickly, in the tone of one who accepts instructions. "I'll be still enough. Go ahead and do the talking."

"Decidedly," advised the sheriff, "be used against you at the trial. And the penalty for body-snatching is twenty-years in this state."

"You do, but what constitutes body-snatching?" murmured Kent. "You do, I guess," retorted the humorous sheriff. "Steady with those hands. Which pocket, please, Professor?"

"Right-hand coat, if you want my money," answered the scientist sullenly.

"Nothing like that," laughed the officer. "Your gun will do, at present."

"I hear you say it. Remember, mine is pointed at your stomach."

"Correct place," approved Kent, quietly shifting his weight to his left foot.

"As Schlager tapped pocket after pocket, without result, 'you can't say I didn't warn you. Now, Frank, the word there was a sharp spat as the heel of Kent's heavy foot, flying in the coup de pied of the old devil, caught the sheriff full on the wrist breaking the bones, and sending the revolver spinning into the darkness. As instantly Sedgwick struck, swinging full-armed, Schlager went down, half-smothered.

"Pip him, Frank," ordered Kent. But Sedgwick needed no directions, now that resolute action was the order.

of the moment. His elbow was already pressed into the sheriff's back, Schlager lay still, moaning a little. "Good work, my boy," approved Kent, who had retrieved the revolver. "Who clubbed me?" growled the fallen man. "I didn't see no third feller. And what good's it going to do me, anyway? There you are, and there's the robbed grave. Exaggerated by assault on an officer of the law," he added technically.

"That's right, too, Kent," added Sedgwick, who was shaking his head. "Ever we do, I don't see but what we are disgraced and ruined."

"Unless," suggested Kent, with mild-toned malice, "we rid ourselves of the only witness to the affair."

A little gasp issued from the thick lips of Len Schlager. But he spoke with courage, and not without a certain dignity. "You got me," he admitted. "If I'm killing why, I guess it's as good a way to go as any. An officer in the discharge of his duty."

Not so sure about the duty, Schlager said Kent with a change of tone. "But your life is safe enough in any event. Pity you're such a greater for you've got your decent points. Let him up, Sedgwick."

Relieved of his assailant's weight, Schlager looked up, rose, set his hand on the ground, and collapsed with a groan.

"Too bad about that wrist," said Kent. "I'll take you back in my car. I have a look after as soon as we've finished here."

"I s'pose you know I'll have to arrest you, just the same."

"Don't bluff," retorted the other calmly. "I'll wait time. Steady! Here comes the rest of the party."

Across the moonlit lawn moved briskly the spare alert figure of the owner of Hedgerow House. His hand grasped a long-barreled pistol. He stepped, five yards of the willow, he stopped, because a voice from behind one of them had suggested to him that he do so.

"I also am armed," the voice added. "Straight for the grave, Blair's face for a brief moment. Then, with set jaw, he came on."

"Two men of courage to deal with in a single night. That's all out of proportion," commented the voice with a slight laugh. "Mr. Blair, I really should dislike shooting you."

"Who are you?" demanded Mr. Blair. "Chester Kent."

"What are you doing on my property at this hour?" "Digging."

"Ah! It was hardly an exclamation, rather a contained commentary. Mr. Blair had noted the humed casket. "You might better have taken my offer," he continued, after a pause of some seconds. "I offer, sir, you have dug the grave of your own son."

"That remains to be seen."

"Schlager! Are you there?" "Yes, Mr. Blair. They've broken my wrist and got my gun."

"Mr. Blair, I noted that you finish the task. You know what I am here for, Mr. Blair. I purpose to open that coffin and then go."

"No," said the master of Hedgerow House, and it was twenty years since his "no" had been overborne.

"Yes," returned Kent quietly. "Mr. Blair's arm rose, steady and slow, with the inevitable motion of machinery."

"If you shoot," pointed out Kent, "you will rouse the house. Is there no one there from whom you wish to conceal that coffin?"

The arm rose higher until the muzzle of the pistol glared, like a baleful justices eye, into Kent's face. Instead of making any counter-motion with the sheriff's revolver, the scientist turned on his heel, walked to Sedgwick, and handed him the weapon.

"You're going to open the coffin, Frank," he announced. "That pistol of Mr. Blair's is a target arm. It has only one shot."

"True," put in its owner, "but I can score one hundred and twenty with it at a hundred yards' range."

"If he should fire, Frank, wing him; then, whatever happens, get that casket open. That is the one thing you must do—Mr. Blair and yourself."

But he may kill you," cried Sedgwick in an agony of apprehension. "He may; but I think he won't."

"Won't he?" muttered the older man on an drawn breath. "I'd rather it was the other scoundrel. But either—or both."

Sedgwick stepped to within two paces of him. "Blair," he said with a snarl, "you so much as think with that trigger finger, and you're dead."

"No, no killing, Frank," countermanded Kent. "In his place, you'd perhaps do as he is doing."

"Don't take any chances, Mr. Blair," besought the sheriff. "They're desperate characters. Look what they done to me!"

"There's a testimonial," murmured Kent, as he picked up his spade, "for one who has always worked on the side of law and order."

He worked the blade carefully under the lid and began to pry. The cover gave slightly. Mr. Blair's pistol sank to his side. "I should have shot before warning you," he said bitterly. "Violating graves is, I suppose, your idea of a lawful and orderly proceeding."

The rending crackle of the hard heavy wood was his answer. Kent stooped, and struggled up bearing a shapeless heavy object in his arms. The object seemed to be swathed in sacking. Kent let it fall to the ground, where it lopped and lay. "All right," said he, with a strong exhalation of relief. "I know it must be. And yet—well, one never is absolute in certainty. And if I'd been wrong, I think, Frank, we could profitably have used that gun on ourselves. You can drop it, now. Come over here."

Courageous though Sedgwick was, his nerves were of a highly sensitive order. He shuddered back. "I don't believe I can do it, Chet."

"You must. As a witness. Come! Brace up!"

Setting the bull's-eye lantern down, Kent produced a pocket-knife. Sedgwick drew a long breath, and walking over, crouched, stealing his nerves against the revelation that should come when the cords should be cut and the swathings reveal their contents. "If I feel over, don't let me tumble into the grave," he said simply, and choked the last word off from becoming a cry of horror as he beheld his friend drive the knife-blade to the hilt in the body, and then whip it across and downward with a long ripping draw under which the harsh cloth saucers hideously.

"Open your eyes! Look! Look!" cried Kent heartily.

A strong trickle of sand flowed out of the rent in the sack and spread upon the ground.

"That is all," said Kent. Relief clamored within Sedgwick for expression. He began to laugh in short choking spasms.

"Quiet!" warned Mr. Blair, in a broken tone of appeal. "You've found out the secret. God knows what you'll do with it. But there are innocent people in the house. I see a light stirring there now. We—I must do what I may to shelter them."

A glimmer shone from the ground floor of one of the wings. Thither Mr. Blair ran, calling out as he went. When he returned, his face was like a mask.

"Now," he said, "what is this matter? Blackmail?"

Kent's face withdrew, as it were, behind his inscrutable half smile. "Peace, if you will," said he. "I should like to know just how much you know."

"An offer, I will tell you whenever you are ready to tell me all the you know. I think we are mutually in need of each other."

"I wish you were at the bottom of that pit," retorted the other grimly. "You and your scoundrel of a friend with you."

Accidentally.

"I wonder how so many forest fires catch?" said Mrs. McBride. "Perhaps they catch accidentally from the mountain ranges," suggested Mr. McBride.—Christian Register.

Dinner Stories

A Dutchman was going to cross a bridge; he was riding in a little cart drawn by a goat. The toll man came out. "Here, you've got to pay toll before you can pass this bridge."

"What to pay toll?" "Yes, five cents to cross this bridge."

After an argument the Dutchman paid the five cents and went on. In the afternoon he came back again only this time he had the goat sitting on the seat, and he was dragging the cart himself. Out came the toll man and said:

"Here, you know you've got to pay five cents."

The Dutchman shook his head, and pointing to the goat, said: "Don't talk to me—ask the driver."

In a small village lived a gentleman whose name was Peacock, and his great hobby was the breeding of turkeys, of which he always kept a large quantity adjoining the roadway, which was a great attraction to the public.

One day a traveler passing that way mingled with a little crowd that asked:

"Whose turkeys are these?"

A youth replied: "They're Peacocks."

Traveler—I asked whose turkeys are those?"

Youth (answering again)—They're Peacocks."

Traveler (excited, and boxing the youth's ears)—You young fool, do you think I can't tell peacocks from turkeys?"

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

GRAPE-FRUIT
(By Howard L. Rann.)

THE TENT.

The tent is a leaky substitute for the sleeping porch which is very popular with people who prefer to put their money into automobile tires. It is much cheaper than a hard pine sleeping porch and does not fire the breasts of the neighbors with bits and unconcealed envy.

The tent consists of one upright leg completely surrounded by invisible punctures. These punctures do not show in the catalogue and are never noticed until it rains, when they begin to perspire downward with the vivacity and surety of aim of a garden hose.

A new tent will go on for days at a time without a shower. When the moment a thunder shower passes by it will reach out and collect several barrels of rain water and deposit it on the recumbent forms of the inmates. This, never happens until all the bedding in the house has been dragged into the tent and placed where it can be saturated in the shortest space of time.

Some tents are provided with a safety appliance known as a flap, which allows the water to run off and form a dam, which backs the water down the neck of somebody who is crowning softly in his sleep.

On account of their limited capacity, tents are inhabited solely by the cross-legged spring cot and the nasal-voiced mosquito. Great care is taken to construct two feet short at both top and bottom, and they also have two yawning side vents through which a man can thrust an unoccupied arm with perfect ease.

After a camper out put in four hours trying to fit six feet of his physique to a four-foot cot and powdered pillow with deceased mosquitoes, he will be sorry that he ever spoke
